Teaching Tolerance	Learning for Justice provides free resources to educators—teachers, administrators, counselors, and other practitioners—who work with children from kindergarten through high school. Educators use our materials to supplement the curriculum, to inform their practices, and to create civil and inclusive school communities where children are respected, valued, and welcome participants. Our program emphasizes social justice and anti-bias. The anti-bias approach encourages children and young people to challenge prejudice and learn how to be agents of change in their own lives. Website: https://www.learningforjustice.org/classroom-resources/film-kits

*Teaching Tolerance
– Teaching Digital
Literacy*

Can your students tell the difference between real news and “fake” news? Do they have the tools to speak up when they witness offensive speech online? Teaching Tolerance introduces a new collection of K–12 lessons to help students learn to be responsible digital citizens. Dr. Kate Shuster discusses today’s online media landscape and examines numerous challenges students may face in the digital era. This webinar will introduce the Teaching Tolerance Digital Literacy Lessons Suite to help you prepare your students to surf intelligently and responsibly.

*Why Diplomacy and Peacebuilding Matter: National
High School Essay
Contest*

Website:
<https://www.we.org/we-schools/>

The U.S. has many tools to advance and defend its foreign policy and national security interests around the world—from diplomatic approaches pursued by members of the Foreign Service, to the range of options available to the U.S. military. In a 1,000-1,250-word essay, identify two cases—one you deem successful and one you deem unsuccessful—where the U.S. pursued an integrated approach to build peace in a conflict-affected country. The Fund for American Diplomacy is the American Foreign Service Association's 501(c)(3) charity supporting its outreach goals and this National High School Essay contest is AFSA's main high school student initiative.

Teaching Tolerance	Learning for Justice provides free resources to educators—teachers, administrators, counselors, and other practitioners—who work with children from kindergarten through high school. Educators use our materials to supplement the curriculum, to inform their practices, and to create civil and inclusive school communities where children are respected, valued, and welcome participants. Our program emphasizes social justice and anti-bias. The anti-bias approach encourages children and young people to challenge prejudice and learn how to be agents of change in their own lives.

Teaching Digital
Literacy*

Can your students tell the difference between real news and “fake” news? Do they have the tools to speak up when they witness offensive speech online? Teaching Tolerance introduces a new collection of K–12 lessons to help students learn to be responsible digital citizens. Dr. Kate Shuster discusses today’s online media landscape and examines numerous challenges students may face in the digital era. This webinar will introduce the Teaching Tolerance Digital Literacy Lessons Suite to help you prepare your students to surf intelligently and responsibly.

Why Diplomacy and Peacebuilding Matter: National High School Essay Contest	The U.S. has many tools to advance and defend its foreign policy and national security interests around the world—from diplomatic approaches pursued by members of the Foreign Service to the range of options available to the U.S. military. In a 1,000-1,250-word essay, identify two cases—one you deem successful and one you deem unsuccessful—where the U.S. pursued an integrated approach to build peace in a conflict-affected country. The Fund for American Diplomacy is the American Foreign Service Association's 501(c)(3) charity supporting its outreach goals and this National High School Essay contest is AFSA's main high school student initiative.
